

The Reset

5 tools for overwhelming moments

PAUSE

Slow the moment

GROUND

Reconnect to here

NOTICE

Name what is happening

CHOOSE

Take one next step

→ → →

Start where you are. You do not need to use all five tools. Pick the one that feels most doable. The goal is not to force yourself to feel better; it is to create a little more space to respond.

01 ORIENT

Look around slowly. Name 5 things you see, 4 things you feel, and 3 things you hear.

EXHALE

02

Breathe in gently for about 4 counts and out for about 6 counts. Repeat without forcing a deep breath.

NAME

03

Try: “Right now I notice...” Name the emotion, thought, or body sensation as specifically as you can.

Prevail Within Counseling prevailwell.com

Finish the Reset

Two more ways to reconnect with your body and choose what comes next.

BODY CHECK

04

Unclench your jaw. Drop your shoulders. Notice your hands, stomach, chest, and legs.
Ask: Where am I holding tension? Try softening that area by 5%.

NEXT NEED

05

Instead of “How do I fix everything?” ask: “What would support me in the next 10 minutes?” Water? Quiet? Movement? A boundary? One small task?

My 10-minute reset plan

When I notice...

The tool I want to try first...

One person or support I can reach for...

Remember: Regulation is not about never feeling overwhelmed. It is about building ways to notice what is happening and support yourself through it.

For education only. If you are in immediate danger or experiencing a mental health emergency, seek emergency or crisis support in your area.